

Pike County Commissioners pull out of TIRAC

By ANDREA B. STERN
Pocono Record Reporter

MILFORD — The Pike County Board of Commissioners officially voted Monday to pull out of the Tocks Island Regional Advisory Council (TIRAC), saying only that they intend to present a resolution concerning their withdrawal at the council's June 10 meeting.

"At that time we will present our reasons," declared board chairman George Coult. "I don't care to elaborate today. We've been thinking about this for a long time. It isn't sudden and we've decided it's time we left."

While the commissioners declined to elaborate further on the reasons for Pike County's dissolution of its ties with TIRAC, they implied they no longer need the seven-year-old agency.

"We don't need TIRAC to represent us. We'll represent ourselves," Commissioner Warner Depuy claimed. Asked if Pike County's voice in the region might be weaker without the support of the council's six other members, he answered, "We think it will be stronger."

"We'll do all right. We'll enjoy the same representation in the U.S. Senate and enjoy the services of one of Pennsylvania's most outstanding congressmen (Joseph McDade, R-10th) and we'll use him."

Depuy maintained TIRAC offers Pike no assets in the form of a unified regional bargaining power.

"It would be my feeling that TIRAC is, as the name denotes, an advisory council and, as far as having any bargaining power as an advisory council, this has never been demonstrated."

Confronted with the fact that government agency officials have stated a strong preference for awarding state and federal grants to regional bodies as opposed to local government units, Depuy retorted, "We aren't concerned with that. That would be discriminating to start with."

"Once we withdraw, we will deal directly with state or federal agencies ourselves," Commissioner James Duffy offered.

"Well, we're sure going to find out," Depuy added.

Duffy had stated last week the county intends to withdraw because TIRAC Director-Secretary Thomas Klock has adopted a pro-Tocks Island position.

Queried Monday about Pike County's stand on Tocks, Depuy said they have been opposed to the federal dam project for eight years.

"When it (Tocks) was first proposed, there was a feeling that the dam would be constructed for human needs — for drinking water, flood control and hydroelectric power," Depuy contended.

"At that time we didn't take a stand. We weren't qualified to. We felt if drinking water was needed, then it would have to be. But then they hooked the recreation area into it and today it would appear the recreational facility has taken over priority of this project, and it's in this that we lodge our objection."

Depuy further maintained no federal provisions have been made for the eroding tax base, police protection, school systems, hospitals "and the rest of the human services you have to provide."

"The benefits to us in this area are nil. Also we feel the project encompasses the whole nation. Therefore, let the whole nation pay for it."

Adding to Depuy's attack on the project, Coult blasted, "Nowhere has the federal government condemned private property on this scale. Here they have taken $200 million worth of private land. I wonder what it might have done for the country if they took the money they have put into Tocks and spread it out through other areas of the country."

TIRAC was formed in 1965 to deal with the effects of the Tocks Island dam project on a regional basis. In addition to Pike, its members include Monroe and Northampton counties in Pennsylvania, Warren and Sussex counties in New Jersey, and Orange and Sullivan counties in New York.

S. Viets score major victory

SAIGON — The South Vietnamese army scored a major victory on the battlefield Monday when air-supported ground forces routed Communist attackers from the district capital of Phu My along the Central Coast. Military sources said the Communist attack plans were supplied by a Viet Cong double defector. To the north, two battles were reported near Hue, one near base camp Bastogne, 10 miles southwest of the old imperial capital, and other southwest of the government northern defense line at My Chanh, 20 miles north of Hue. A total of 34 Communists were killed at a cost of two South Vietnamese killed and 20 wounded in both skirmishes.

Algeria to return ransom

ALGIERS — Algeria will return the $500,000 ransom of two Western Airlines hijackers but will give the couple political shelter in the local Black Panther colony, government officials said Monday. William Holden, 22, a black Vietnam war veteran, and his blonde companion, Katherine Mary Kerkow, 21, hijacked a Western Airlines 720 from San Francisco to Algiers Saturday. They brought with them $500,000 extorted from Western in San Francisco and asked for political asylum.

Defense costs cut not seen

WASHINGTON — SALT accord may not cut defense costs, Laird warned. He said that the rising costs of the Vietnam war will more than offset any short-term savings resulting from the U.S. Soviet arms agreement. Looking toward the long term, he told a Senate subcommittee that the U.S. must begin a crash program to develop new submarines and bombers to keep up with the Russians.

Israel prepares for attack

TEL AVIV — Dayan called for the death penalty for terrorists. The Israeli defense minister made the suggestion as Israelis and Arabs marked the fifth anniversary of the six-day Mideast war. Fears that commandos might try another attack on the Tel Aviv Airport, similar to the one of last week, caused airport officials to beef up security with extra guards and to check all passengers and luggage for weapons. Similar precautions were taken at airports throughout Europe.

Bomb rips Irish bakery

ULSTER — A bomb shattered a bakery in Londonderry, Northern Ireland, shortly before the British overlord, William Whitelaw, arrived in the city. He was to talk with representatives of the spreading Ulster peace movement and to receive petitions bearing several thousand signatures expressing support for his efforts and calling for an end to violence. But restive Londonderry Protestants, angered by the continuation of barricades around Catholic "no-to" areas, announced plans for another demonstration next Saturday. A similar protest over the weekend ended in a violent clash with police.

Beer workers brew over free suds breaks

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Some 650 employees at two C. Schmidt & Sons, Inc. breweries in the Philadelphia area figure 50 years of free beer is just as important as wages and other contract benefits.

The firm's brewers and bottlers went on strike Monday at plants here and nearby Norristown, Pa., after a breakdown in weekend negotiations for a new three-year contract.

Members of Local 5 and 183 of the United Brewery Workers Union explained that "conditions, not wages" were the main issues in the dispute.

One member said one of the main issues was the company's plan to eliminate two bartenders who supply the workers with free beer during two half hour breaks.

"They've been doing that for 50 years," the union member said, "and now they want to take it away from us."

A company spokesman said the firm was able to maintain beer stored at the plants but that production was halted.

A meeting with a federal mediator was scheduled for Wednesday, the union said.

Postal panel OKs rate hikes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Postal Rate Commission Monday recommended making permanent $1.37 billion a year in postage increases that Americans have been paying on a temporary basis for the past year.

But apparently mindful of criticism that the commission might just rubber stamp the recommendations of the newly reorganized postal service, the commissioners trimmed the amount of increases sought by 5.6 per cent, from $1.45 billion a year to $1.37 billion.

None of the "temporary" increases that Americans have been paying since May 16, 1971, were upset. If finally approved, that means that first-class stamps still will cost 8 cents; air mail will stay at 11 cents and postal cards will still cost 6 cents.

The Postal Service had asked for an increase in the price of postal cards to 7 cents, but the commission denied that. The commission said that alone would save American's some $25 million a year.

The commission also turned down increases in the zone rate for second-class mail, primarily newspapers and magazines, and proposed hikes for third class bulk mail.

The commission said its ruling on second class mail would save mailers $21.8 million a year. The remainder of the $78.3 million in proposed increases that it denied were in bulk mail rates.

The five commissioners, appointed by the President, made their recommendation after a year of hearings. The Postal Service can now accept their decision, put the rates into effect while seeking a rehearing, or appeal in federal court.

Since the commission cut so little from the Postal Service's request, it appeared likely that the recommendations would be accepted. The law reorganizing the Post Office into a semigovernmental nonprofit corporation permitted the new Postal Service to raise its rates by one-third across the board while the Rate Commission considered permanent increases.

The commissioners agreed with the Postal Service that third class mailers — primarily advertisers — should bear the cost of a one-third increase in full now, instead of having it phased over five years as the service originally recommended.

The 11-member Board of Governors of the Postal Service has three options: approve the decision; let it take effect under protest, and either appeal to the courts or seek reconsideration by the commission; or reject the decision and resubmit it to the commission for reconsideration.

With the relatively minor difference between the original recommendation and what the commission approved, it was expected the decision would be permitted to stand.

Temporary postal rates can remain in effect not more than 30 days after the governors receive a recommended decision from the commission. The commission disagreed with the Postal Service's request for a 142 per cent increase for second class mail, primarily magazines and newspapers. It suggested the rate be cut from 1.9 to 1.6 cents per piece and the advertising per pound zone rates be cut from 20.9 to 19 cents.

The commission said this would leave a 131 per cent increase in effect for second class mail.

The commission urged the minimum per piece rate for the first 250,000 pieces of third class mail be cut from 5 to 4.8 cents. It agreed with the Postal Service recommendation for no change in parcel post rates and said the special fourth class rate for books, records and films should be cut 1 cent to 21 cents.

The commission said it plans to institute a rulemaking proceeding to determine what cost and revenue data should be obtained for future proceedings.

Administration asks delay in passage of tax reforms

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration Monday rejected as "out of the question" suggestions that tax reform be tied to a debt ceiling bill that must be passed by the end of the month.

But spokesmen for the Treasury and President Nixon offered to work out some new tax laws with Congress next year.

"We firmly believe that the matter of further tax revision should be dealt with in the next Congress," Charles E. Walker, acting Treasury secretary, and George P. Shultz, President Nixon's nominee to be secretary, told the House Ways and Means Committee.

The committee is considering Nixon's request to boost the current $450 billion debt limit, which will revert to the old $400 billion ceiling after June 30 without new congressional authority, to $465 billion.

Walker said the government was $429.2 billion in debt as of May 31, but he also said "the federal fiscal situation has improved significantly in recent months." He said the anticipated $39 billion 1972 budget deficit is now estimated at $26 billion while an earlier 1973 deficit forecast was raised from $25.5 billion to $27 billion.

The improved deficit picture, Walker acknowledged, was largely due to nearly $7 billion in overwithholding of federal income taxes. Committee Democrats charged this overwithholding was purposeful to make the budget look better.

Congressional liberals have urged that the debt bill be used to carry along reform provisions as insurance against a veto.

Wilbur Mills to push passage of tax reform

Dow Jones-Ottaway News
WASHINGTON — Chairman Wilbur Mills intends to make tax reform the next big item on the House Ways and Means Committee's agenda.

The Arkansas democrat said in an interview that he hoped the committee quickly will approve his recently introduced measure to abolish most big federal tax preferences in three stages by 1974, forcing a substantial revision of the tax code.

But he said that even if that bill got sidetracked, he intended to ask the committee to hold hearings on the matter early next year and to draft a comprehensive tax-reform measure. He said there were "many areas" of the 1969 tax reform act where he believes Congress "didn't go far enough" in tightening preferential tax treatment. Mills' bill covers 54 special tax provisions, including capital-gains treatment, the oil-depletion allowance and the tax-exemption for interest on state and local bonds.

FBI agent testifies hijack haul in Red Chinese bank

MIAMI (UPI) — An FBI agent testified Monday that the hijacker of an Eastern Air Lines plane told him the $303,000 ransom he collected was being channeled through a Chinese Communist bank for use in unspecified Latin American causes.

But, agent Norman Bliss said at a U.S. magistrate's hearing, accused hijacker Frederick William Hahneman told him he was personally a right-wing anti-Communist.

Bliss said Hahneman told him after his surrender Saturday in Honduras — where he parachuted from the commandeered plane May 6 — that the ransom money paid by the airline would eventually come back to the United States to aid the Latin causes.

Bliss said that to his knowledge the money had not yet been located.

At the end of the hearing, magistrate Michael J. Osman recommended that Hahneman be transferred to Alexandria, Va., to face charges of air piracy, kidnapping and assault with a deadly weapon. Brian P. Gettings, U.S. attorney for Eastern Virginia, said in Alexandria he may ask for the death penalty for Hahneman.

The 49-year-old Hahneman, a communications engineer, sat quietly through the hearing, dressed in a blue shirt and faded khaki pants. He removed his horned rim glasses occasionally to rub his eyes.

Asked by court appointed defense attorney William Stiles if Hahneman had said he was a Communist, Bliss said, "He said he was strongly anti-Communist—that he is far to the right."

The agent did not attempt to explain the apparent discrepancy between Hahneman's personal philosophy and the use of a Communist bank to channel the money.

Hahneman is accused of hijacking Eastern's flight 175 on May 5 as it left Allentown, Pa., bound for Washington and Miami. The plane landed at Dulles Airport outside the capital to take on a supply of parachutes, bush knives, cigarettes, a jump suit and helmet—all ordered by Hahneman—and the $303,000.

After taking off from Washington, the plane turned back because Hahneman wanted larger denomination bills.

Yorty endorses underdog HHH

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Hubert Humphrey, the underdog in Tuesday's showdown California primary, won a surprise endorsement Monday from Los Angeles Mayor Sam Yorty who sharply attacked George McGovern as "an old fashioned medicine man."

Yorty, one of eight Democrats listed on the California ballot, also pleaded with supporters of partially paralyzed Alabama Gov. George Wallace to "give up their futile write-in campaign" and vote for Humphrey as "the best bet to derail the McGovern steamroller."

"This is not in any way, shape or form what the governor wants his supporters to do," Wallace campaign manager John Grainer replied to newsmen. "We're going all out for the governor and nobody else."

Yorty, who enjoys being referred to as "the maverick mayor," charged that "our Democratic party is threatened with suicidal radicalization by Sen. George McGovern's lavishly financed campaign of deception and demagoguery."

McGovern at first laughed off the Yorty move when informed of it at the San Diego airport. "It crushes me. I'm going to withdraw from the race," quipped the South Dakotan.

But McGovern then added seriously, "I don't think it will make much difference at this point."

Humphrey termed the endorsement was a pleasant surprise.

"I hadn't any indication. I'm pleased. It is very helpful, particularly here in Los Angeles," the former vice president and 1968 Democratic nominee told newsmen at the Long Beach airport.

Humphrey told enthusiastic aerospace workers he was doing his "damndest" to win California's big primary with its 271 delegates. But the senator indicated to newsmen in San Francisco's Chinatown he was privately resigned to the eventuality of defeat.

"Whatever the results are tomorrow I shall not be complaining if it runs against me," he said.

The impact of Yorty's endorsement on Tuesday's crucial election was uncertain. The mayor's anti-McGovern message, patterned after the lines of Humphrey's basic campaign theme but in much stronger language, was certain to receive wide attention in California. But his political following is minimal.

A California poll conducted by respected public opinion surveyor Mervin Field last week showed McGovern with 46 per cent of the Democratic vote, Humphrey with 26 and Yorty with only 1.

Simple funeral service marks burial of duke

WINDSOR, England (UPI) — The Duke of Windsor was buried Monday after a simple service at Windsor Castle where he announced to the world 36 years ago he had given up an empire to marry the woman he loved.

The curfew bell of St. George's Chapel, which tolls the death of kings, rang out for an hour before the 200 mourners gathered to pay their last respects to the duke who reigned for 11 months in 1936 as King Edward VIII.

His duchess, accepted into the royal family only with their common bereavement, sat between Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip during the ritual service of the Church of England.

The duchess, accompanied by a dozen fellow mourners—four of them members of the royal family—followed the casket of English oak the half mile to the tiny cemetery of Frogmore House on the Windsor grounds near the pond where the young Prince Edward had sailed his boats.

Then the 75-year-old duchess, her personal physician at her side, said her goodbyes and left for the London airport and the trip back to Paris.

Waldheim asks world aid to stop ecological disaster

STOCKHOLM (UPI)—Secretary General Kurt Waldheim opened the United Nations' first conference on the environment Monday with a call for international cooperation to avoid global ecological disaster.

Waldheim did not mention that the Soviet Union and most of its East European allies were not among the 112 countries represented at the 11-day conference.

The Communist bloc, with the exceptions of Yugoslavia and Romania, boycotted the conference to protest the U.N.'s decision not to invite East Germany. China is participating.

Ingemar Bengtsson, the Swedish minister of agriculture who was elected president of the conference, deplored the Communist bloc boycott in his address.

"The presence of 112 countries is a telling tribute to the importance attached to environmental problems," he said. "But it is highly regrettable that power politics have caused the absence of some important countries."

U.S. delegation chief Russell E. Train, chairman of the U.S. Council on Environmental Quality, said the Communist bloc boycott would not prejudice the conference since all its proposals and recommendations would go before the U.N. General Assembly, where the Communists are represented.

Waldheim, speaking at a welcoming ceremony prior to the first conference session, said the meeting could become a turning point in the history of mankind.

As he spoke, police arrested nine youths outside the building as they tried to stop delegates from entering. In addition, two women were arrested for hoisting a Viet Cong flag on a nearby building.

The U.N. conference has come under fire from large radical groups in Sweden and abroad which claim the U.N. is avoiding "the real issues," especially the Vietnam War.

"It is indeed a historic conference," Waldheim said.

Connally to take 15-nation tour to explain U.S. policy

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (UPI)—President Nixon Monday picked retiring Treasury Secretary John B. Connally to make a month-long trip around the world to explain administration foreign policy to the leaders of about 15 countries.

Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said Connally would leave today for the trip, which will take him to South America first, then the Far East, South Asia and Europe. Ziegler described the tour as "a further effort on the part of the President and the United States government to continue communications with other governments around the world."

Nixon's choice of Connally for a sensitive foreign policy assignment is sure to encourage speculation that the three-time Texas governor is being groomed for a high post in the administration if the President is re-elected in November.

Connally, who announced his resignation last month as the only Democrat in the cabinet, will discuss general issues including Nixon's Moscow summit, as well as his own specialty—economic affairs, Ziegler said.

Connally and White House adviser Henry A. Kissinger were summoned to Nixon's villa beside Biscayne Bay for a discussion of Connally's trip and of a previously announced visit by Kissinger to Japan beginning Friday.

The President's Florida stay has been marred by daily rain showers. Nixon planned to return to Washington Monday night. Ziegler said Connally will leave on his trip today from Key Biscayne, flying first to Venezuela. The White House announced only his specific stops in South America—Venezuela, Colombia, Brazil, Argentina, Bolivia and Peru. Other nations on his itinerary were not announced, nor was the specific length of the trip, which Ziegler said would run about a month.

Ziegler said although Connally will be prepared to discuss the U.S. position on Vietnam and specifically on prisoners of war, he was not undertaking a mission to negotiate the release of the captives.

"The secretary will be prepared to talk about any subject that the leaders of those countries (he will visit) would like to raise."

73,674 win in lottery

HARRISBURG (UPI)—Revenue Secretary Robert P. Kane said Monday the Pennsylvania Lottery Bureau has paid out $11.8 million to 73,674 winners in the state lottery.

Kane said the total includes all claims filed during the first 10 weeks of the lottery but does not include all the winners.

He said additional claims going back as far as the first drawing are being received, validated and processed daily.

The Revenue Secretary said a compilation of all claims up to and including the May 17 drawings shows there were forty nine $50,000 winners, seven $10,000 winners, 540 $4,000 winners, 580 $1,000 winners, 185 $500 winners, 5,529 $400 winners, 4,351 $100 winners, 1,934 $50 winners and 60,496 $40 winners for a total of $11,815,740.

The list does not include winners in the last two weekly drawings nor the second "Sudden Millionaire" lottery held last week.

Philadelphia County had the most winners during the first 10 weeks as 11,920 persons collected $6,689,010 and Allegheny County was close behind with 9,466 persons winning $1,244,590. The county with the fewest winners was Sullivan, where 18 persons collected $1,800.

Wallace confers with successor

SILVER SPRING (UPI)—Gov. George C. Wallace talked by telephone Monday morning from Holy Cross Hospital with his temporary legal successor as Alabama's chief executive, Lt. Gov. Jere Beasley, to establish a cooperative working basis.

Beasley became governor at 12:01 a.m. EDT, 21 days after Wallace was shot at a political rally at Laurel, Md.

"Beasley assured the governor he would do nothing without the governor's approval."

Shapp hires consultant to study liquor monopoly

HARRISBURG (UPI)—Gov. Milton J. Shapp has asked a Philadelphia consultant to find out if the state can afford to lose its control of liquor and wine sales.

Shapp commissioned Sol Zubrow, a management consultant, to study the nation's largest liquor monopoly—the Pennsylvania Liquor Control Board.

He is being paid $100 a day plus expenses up to $21,000.

"The governor does not want to take the liquor out if we are going to lose a lot of revenue," a Shapp spokesman said. "The study is being done to determine the actual effect it would have financially."

LCB Chairman Edwin Winner said he opposed both the study and any changes in the current system of distributing wine and liquor.

"I'm very well satisfied with the present system," he said. "It's the only one which has any merit. Absolutely, we must control the sale of alcoholic beverages."

Winner said the LCB turned over to the state's General Fund $50 million in clear profit. He said liquor sales also contributed $105 million in taxes.

The LCB has 746 stores around the state. It represents a larger system than any of the other 16 states which handle liquor sales.

The spokesman for Shapp said an administration proposal to take wine out of the state stores would be introduced in the legislature "shortly."

"The feeling is that wine sales, just as they did in Maine when they were taken out of the state stores, would increase to the point where there would be no loss of revenue," he said. "Also, it would eliminate the warehousing of lower-cost products."

Winner said the warehousing argument was "propaganda." He said no one in the LCB considers storage and handling of wine a problem.

"The wine business amounted to $71 million in business last year," Winner said. "We sold through the LCB 3,800,000 cases of wine."

"I see no reason why the state should give up that business."

House members' interests cited

WASHINGTON (UPI)—About one-third of the House's 433 members hold outside interests in businesses and law firms that invite a potential conflict of interest with their legislative duties, a citizens group reported Monday.

The National Committee for an Effective Congress (NCEC) suggested the actual total probably was greater but the House's financial disclosure requirements prevented a full tabulation.

Even so, they were far more informative than corresponding Senate rules, which the NCEC said "are so limited as to preclude any meaningful analysis."

The group published the results of "an in-depth review" of reports filed by lawmakers with the House Ethics Committee, generally covering calendar 1971.

Among the principal findings about the House members:

—52 participate in some way with a law firm, maintaining an office in their name, a partnership in a firm "or some looser association";

—41 serve as directors, chairmen of the board, or officers in, or receive income for other services from financial institutions, such as banks and savings and loan associations, all which are subject to government regulation.

—23 reported financially active relationships with insurance, title or mortgage companies, mutual funds and real estate and insurance companies and other firms that are affected by legislation enacted by Congress and implemented by federal agencies under the scrutiny of Congress.

—65 hold "close affiliations" with other enterprises such as oil development, advertising and broadcasting media, real estate development or management, farms "and a variety of industrial enterprises."

But the NCEC said: "It follows that the overwhelming majority of congressmen (about two-thirds) report no positions of management or similar affiliations of the kind discussed here. These members apparently have found no inconvenience or hardship in refraining from such outside activities."

It would give the state the power to take action on specific air pollution problems if local authorities were not doing a sufficient job.

It also would abolish regional air pollution control associations and transfer their duties and functions to the state Environmental Hearing Board.

The bill was sent to the Senate for concurrence.

Israel observes victory

TEL AVIV (UPI)—Israel marked the fifth anniversary of its Middle East war victory over the Arabs Monday, and Defense Minister Moshe Dayan warned his troops would retaliate for any repetition of the pro-Arab commando attack at Tel Aviv's Lod airport.

As Dayan spoke, a military spokesman said one Israeli soldier was killed and another wounded when Arab guerrillas from Syria fired bazookas into a civilian vehicle on the occupied Golan Heights.

Fears that commandos might try another attack caused airport officials to beef up security with extra civilian and military guards and check all passengers and luggage for weapons. Similar precautions were taken at airports throughout Europe.

The commando attack May 30 was made by three Japanese extremists who trained 2-12 months with Arab guerrillas in Lebanon, police said. Twenty-four unarmed bystanders in the Tel Aviv airport were killed.

In a radio interview Monday, Dayan said the attack had not disrupted air traffic in and out of Israel, and that any attempt to do so would be repaid in kind.

"There is nothing easier for Israel than to paralyze air communications, if indeed countries like Lebanon and Egypt should try, by means of or with the help of terrorists, to paralyze our lines of communications," Dayan said.

Court rules remap plan meets constitutional law

PHILADELPHIA (UPI)—The Pennsylvania Supreme Court Monday said the new state legislative reapportionment plan meets the criteria of the U.S. and state constitutions.

The court ruled by a 4-3 margin on Feb. 7 that the reapportionment plan submitted in 1971 by the Legislative Reapportionment Commission was constitutional. But the justices spent almost four months preparing their detailed opinions.

Justice Samuel J. Roberts, who wrote the majority opinion of the court, said the reapportionment plan met the three constitutional requirements of equality of population, political integrity and geographical contiguity.

In a dissenting opinion, Justice Benjamin R. Jones held that the reapportionment plan "amounts to constitutionally offensive and political gerrymandering."

Roberts wrote that none of the new senatorial or legislative districts deviate more than 5.5 per cent from a mathematically "ideal" district.

"Since the overriding objective of any plan must be substantial equality of population among the various districts," Roberts wrote, "our first inquiry is whether the commission's plans meet that objective. We believe that it does."

Roberts noted that under the commission's plan a number of political subdivisions—including voting precincts and wards—had to be split up. But he argued that the subdivision "was obviously necessitated by the stricter requirements of population equality that are now in order."

The justice said none of the 17 appellants who challenged the reapportionment plan offered concrete evidence that the new districts lacked geographical compactness.

"We cannot conclude, merely on the basis of the appellants' unsupported assertions, that the commission's plan fails for lack of compactness," the justice wrote.

Pollution law stiffer

HARRISBURG (UPI)—The House voted 172-3 Monday to give the state stronger enforcement power against air polluters.

It would give the state the power to take action on specific air pollution problems if local authorities were not doing a sufficient job.

It also would abolish regional air pollution control associations and transfer their duties and functions to the state Environmental Hearing Board.

The bill was sent to the Senate for concurrence.

New West End minister urges church involvement

BY MAUREEN RUFE
Pocono Record Reporter

BRODHEADSVILLE — "The church in the 70's has to discover its own identity and build programs to serve that identity," said the Rev. Paul Xander, a young Lutheran minister who has just been called to serve the Zion United Church, Lutheran in Brodheadsville.

Xander's comments came when he was asked what kind of programs he felt should be instituted at the Brodheadsville church, which became a totally Lutheran parish in February. (Prior to that time the congregation was part United Church of Christ.)

"The church here has to help the people in the West End," continued the young pastor, who was just ordained May 23. "The people have a need to understand population growth, planning and zoning and the church should be a part of this."

Xander stressed that his role as a pastor would be one of a resource nature so the congregation could determine what it's about, and so the congregation can become a visible resource of faith.

He suggested, however, that the church would have to get involved in the areas educational system and would recognize a responsibility toward the elderly in the West End.

In commenting about relations with other churches and future joint programs, the young minister, who received his undergraduate training in psychology at Gettysburg College, commended the Zion church for establishing good relations with the Roman Catholic church in Brodheadsville.

"There has to be cooperation between all the churches," he said. "Those who don't cooperate, will be passed over."

According to the tall, sandy haired Gettysburg graduate, who also attended the seminary at Gettysburg, his congregation of approximately 340 to 350 people is "riding the crest of a wave" and is excited about the parish and its development.

"The challenge in the beginning, for me," said the young pastor, "will be to sit back and listen and watch the congregation in its present 'holding pattern' until I can see where they are at the present time."

In terms of advancing specific programs for youth, etc., the innovative pastor said it was important to realize that the church should not think specifically about developing something for youth; it should, instead, develop thinking that would allow people to do things together as Christians.

The possibility of varied services, and special youth innovations are being considered for implementation at the Zion church, and Xander said the congregation was already quite progressive and innovative.

Originally from Lehighton and having served in an internship capacity, Xander said the rural West End did not pose any problem for him in his ministry.

He said his youth was an advantage because he had a wide-open spectrum as a pastor and had no preconceived ideas about what the church should do. He suggested that the only difficulty for him might occur with counseling parishioners who were middle aged.

"This age group is always the most difficult to minister to, because they don't seem to have confidence in a young minister," he said. "Middle age is a real risky business for them."

Xander has a wife and a 17-month old son Edward. His future plans may include providing chaplain services for the Pocono International Speedway in addition to being a pastor for the Brodheadsville church.

Rained so hard last Wednesday, I followed the lights of a school bus down Fifth Street to work. What a temptation to go back to finish the second grade!

You know you're over the hill when that good looking young girl stands up to give you a seat when you come in to a party.

Vacation: Spending two weeks in a camper with the ones you thought you loved the most.

What constitutes a living wage depends on whether you're giving it or getting it.

If you see good in everyone, you may be an optimist. Then again, you may just be a little odd.

We are a little odd at Rosen's Furniture and a little better. Mrs. P.T. of Allentown writes, "We liked the most complete selection. Your store is clean and beautiful. We would recommend you to any of our friends."

Faithful adherence to the advice of a physician is of stellar importance in the treatment of diabetes. Pen Argyl Hydroelectric unit graduation given overtime run on tap

PEN ARGYL — Pen Argyl Area High School will hold its Baccalaureate Service and the 72nd annual commencement exercises on Sunday, June 11 on the high school athletic field.

Baccalaureate Services will begin at 5 p.m. and end at approximately 6 p.m. Rev. William Marvin, West Bangor and Wind Gap Episcopal Churches, will act as liturgist with Rev. Joseph Sheehan, St. Roch's Roman Catholic Church, presenting the message.

Commencement exercises will begin at 6:30 p.m. Student speakers will be Nancy Albert, Mark Brune and Joyce Casario.

Dr. Wilson Kresge, superintendent of schools, will address the graduates, and Thomas Lee, high school principal, will present awards to the graduates.

Frank Brumbaugh, president of the board of education, and Robert Stratton, vice-president of the board, will present the diplomas.

In event of rain, the ceremonies will be held in the senior high school gymnasium.

PAUPACK — Lake Wallenpaupack hydro electric station, which normally is kept on a standby basis on Saturdays and Sundays, was operated this past weekend in order to reduce the water level of the rain swollen lake.

Announcement of the status of the power station was made Monday by the Pennsylvania Power & Light Co.

A PP&L spokesman said a four-inch rain fall drenched the Wallenpaupack water shed last week and poured hundreds of millions of gallons into the big lake.

Although the heavy runoff had tapered off considerably by Monday, the possibility of more rain over the weekend made it obvious that the lake elevation could be adequately controlled only with a compensating release of water through the generating plant and into the Lackawaxen River.

Under normal circumstances, the plant would have been held in reserve all weekend as a means of stabilizing the river flow for the benefit of fishermen, the spokesman said.

PP&L, owner of the lake, has been operating the plant full time since the storm struck. It also took the unique step of opening a spillway gate for 15 hours, allowing 750 million gallons to bypass the plant's turbine generators.

Despite these efforts, the water has remained above the 1,188 foot level since early last Thursday.

Stamp collector 'visits' far off places with hobby

TOBYHANNA — "I've always been interested in faroff places," says Stan Radgowski, president of the Northeastern Pennsylvania Philatelic Society.

Radgowski, who works at Tobyhanna Army Depot as a management analyst with Force Development Division, has headed the regional stampcollecting group the past five years.

"I can't understand why they keep re-electing me," he states modestly. "Maybe they like my corny jokes."

In addition to serving as toastmaster at club functions, he also receives many invitations to address other philatelic societies. The subject usually is his rare collection of stamps from Tibet.

Radgowski is believed to be one of only two Americans to receive hand-typographed stamps and an original letter on handmade tree-bark paper from the Dalai Lama, former monarch of that distant country now ruled by Red China.

Recalling his feeling when he penned his request more than 20 years ago, he says, "I didn't really expect an answer. The Dalai Lama was one of the most difficult rulers in the world to approach because he is thought of as a god by his people."

As luck would have it, Lowell Thomas, the famous explorer and radio commentator, had obtained permission to enter the country with a scientific expedition and the relaxed border restrictions also allowed Radgowski's letter to reach Lhasa, the capital city, where the Dalai Lama then lived.

He not only received five sheets of highly unusual stamps but also a Tibetan scroll with a message from the Dalai Lama and an accompanying English translation that carried the Monarch's official seal.

Since then, he has augmented his collection with other stamps from Tibet and now possesses one of the most unique assortments to be found among philatelists anywhere.

This display won for him two Grand Awards and a Gold Medal at national stamp shows. It was the featured exhibit at the Garfield-Perry Stamp Club of Cleveland, the oldest such club in the country and at the National Philatelic Museum in Philadelphia.

The exhibit was also shown as explained in Stroudsburg recently when Radgowski lectured to that area's stamp club.

He became interested in philately at the age of 11 but didn't begin to specialize until after World War II.

During that war, he served as an infantryman with the Third Army, seeing action in France, Holland, Belgium, Luxembourg and Germany. On short leaves from the fighting, he "picked up" stamps wherever he could, stuffing them into his pack for hopeful later addition to his scrap books.

He says he is more interested in stamp collecting now than ever.

The club he heads includes men and women from all walks of life. "Our oldest member is 86 and our youngest about nine or 10," he notes.

Besides stamp collecting, he goes in for painting in oils and fossil-hunting, the latter hobby with his young daughter Lee, who shares his interest in geography and mystic, exotic lands.

If he had the money and received permission from the new Tibetan government, he would visit that country and search for Shang-ri-la, the utopian city pictured in the film, "Lost Horizon."

Rubber Duck Co. expedition on tap

SWIFTWATER — Pocono Mountain's Rubber Ducks are leaving their bathtubs and heading for northern Minnesota and southwestern Ontario.

Known as the Rubber Duck Company II, 25 seniors will leave June 15 for the Border Waters Wilderness Canoe Area, a 15,000 square mile waterways region.

This is the second group in two years to take the trek. The idea originated in a senior ecology class taught by Clancy Dennis, who will head the entourage.

Last year's precedents were followed by the 25, as they sold five dollar shares of "Rubber Duck" stock and took on various business projects to increase their worth to nearly $3,000.

The other half of the expenses needed were earned or acquired individually.

Classes in survival swimming and senior life saving were held two nights a week this year at a local resort, the Jumbo-Lynn in Paradise Valley.

Paul Smith, another company teacher-advisor, and Joseph Fisher, water safety instructor, handled the instruction, and the company met each Thursday in the high school gym for physical workouts.

As soon as the Delaware River cleared itself of ice, the Ducks began practice runs and increased their canoeing skills to class six water at Skinner's Falls.

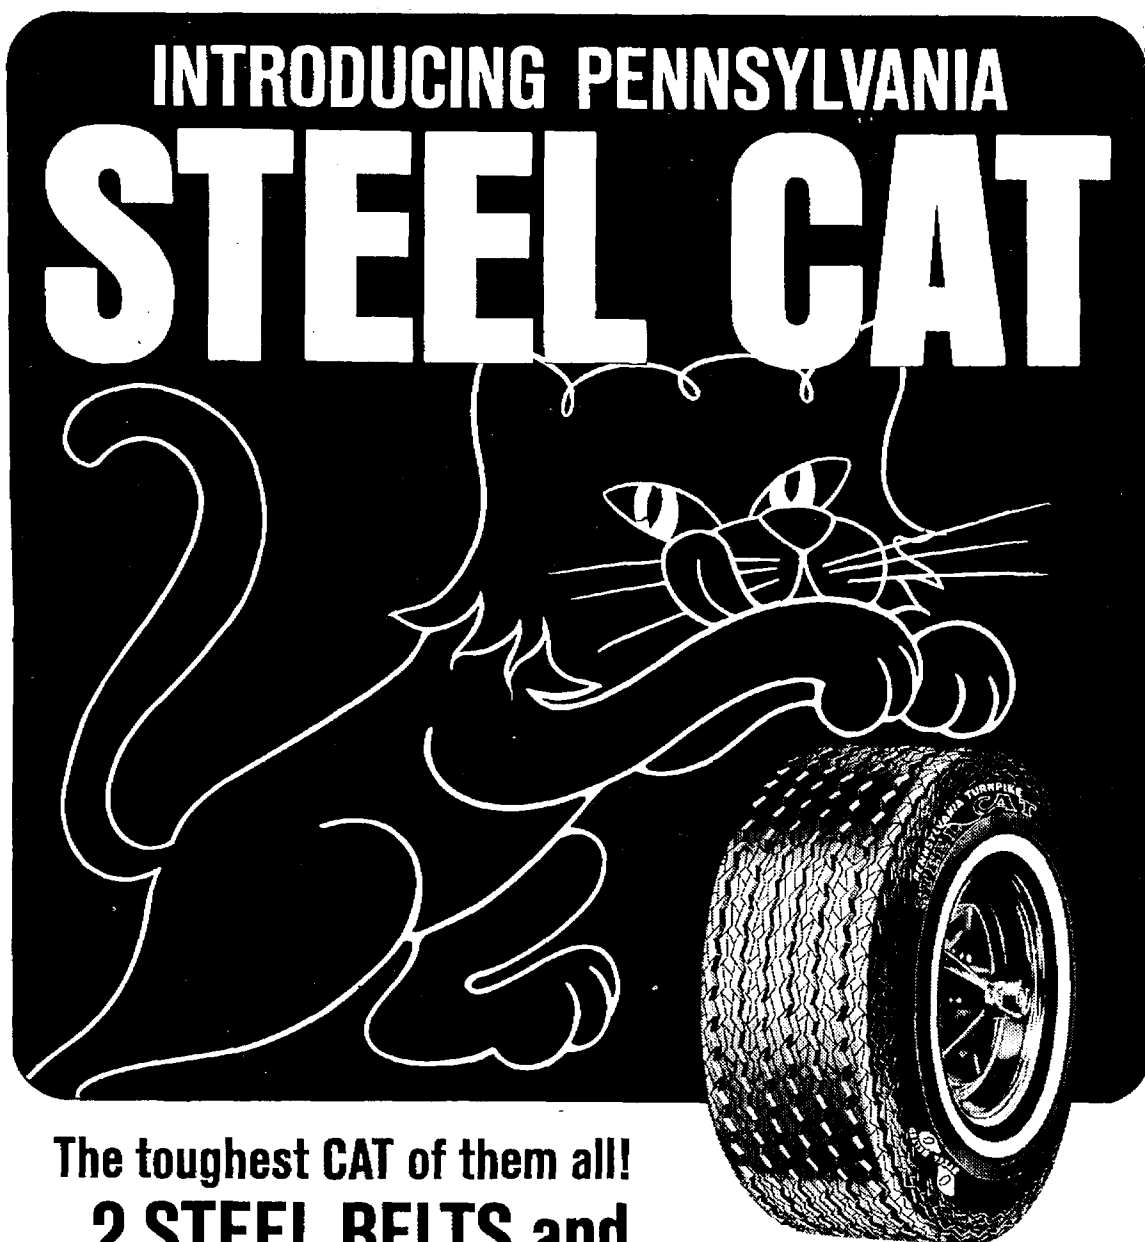

Leg muscles and backs were conditioned by 18 mile hikes with packs up the Appalachian Trail from Delaware Water Gap.

Accompanying Dennis and Smith will be Dr. E.T. Horn and Michael Patney, both General Hospital of Monroe County staff members. They are scheduled to return to the high school on June 28.

The Border Waters Canoe Area teems with a variety of waterfowl and wildlife and is one of the few remaining areas where the timber wolf lives.

Throughout the voyage, the Ducks will retrace the steps of the French voyageurs of the 17th century, passing isolated rendezvous for the early fur traders and encountering Indian pictographs several hundred years old.

After arrival in Elmy, Minn., on June 16, they will stay in lodges just south of the Canadian border. The next day, they will begin a 10-day, 100 mile canoe voyage.

U.S. justice exonerated again

One of the more ironic and heavy-handed pieces of propaganda against the objectivity of justice in the United States that's trotted out occasionally is the tired charge that a black person can't get a fair trial in this country.

Unfortunately for the spielers of that propaganda, it isn't true. And the falsity of the claim is proven just about every time the claim is made.

Sunday, the latest disclaimer was made when an all-white jury acquitted black revolutionary Angela Davis of conspiracy in the shootout at the Marin County, Calif., Courthouse last Aug. 7 that left four people dead, including the judge presiding over the trial of three prisoners charged with a prison murder.

Her acquittal wasn't the first. A few months ago, several Black Panther members were found innocent of a conspiracy to murder New York City police. And a short while before that, the same verdict was handed down in another conspiracy trial involving more Black Panthers in New Haven, Conn.

There are other examples, all pointing to the undeniable fact that United States court justice is as fair and objective for blacks as for anyone else.

That doesn't mean that more propaganda won't be trotted out and aimed at our judicial system, of course. That's the way of a propaganda war. As Dr. Joseph Goebbels once said, if you repeat a lie often enough, people eventually will believe it.

We just hope that people listening to that sort of drivel don't forget Angela Davis and others like her, who came before the court under the presumption of innocence, presented their defense and left with that presumption verified. That's the way it should be, and that's the way it is. Just tell it that way.

Set lotteries free!

Taxes and sundry revenue to be derived from gambling have become a popular source of relief for overburdened taxpayers (our politicians have not yet reached the radical stage at which they will seriously entertain significant reductions in public spending as the logical alternative).

Given those circumstances, a bill introduced by Congress the other day by Sen. Richard S. Schweiker, Pennsylvania's junior representative in the Senate, deserves prompt attention. Sen. Schweiker proposes to exempt state-operated lotteries from restrictive federal postal, broadcasting and gambling laws.

Sen. Schweiker's bill would (1) allow radio and television broadcasting of state lottery information; (2) exempt state lotteries from postal restrictions so as to allow newspapers to publish lottery information without fear of violating postal laws and also allow mailing of state lotteries; (3) allow advertisements of state lotteries in newspapers and on radio and television stations; (4) exempt state lotteries from the 10 per cent tax on all wagers; (5) allow transportation of state lottery information and devices in interstate commerce; (6) exempt state lotteries using vending machines for the sale of lottery tickets from the special federal tax on coin-operated gaming machines.

Sen. Schweiker rest his case on the argument that states are turning more and more to gambling revenue to finance important public service.

The postal regulations, in particular, ought to be abandoned on still another score. Maybe if the mailman were relieved of all the accessory obligations Congress has saddled him with he'd be able to do a better job of delivering the mail which is what he's supposed to do in the first place.

King's tale of cabbages

He was a humorless owl in a porkpie hat, but he could write about everything and he could write about nothing. Like all the super champs in sports and writing, Damon Runyon made it in the second quarter of this century. He and the Babe Ruths and Tildens and Dempseys and Red Granges and Bronkos, Nagurskis and Hemingways, Faulkners and Fitzgeralds climbed over each other to get to the top.

The hardest thing to write is nothing, and Runyon could peck out the words and make them ring like an anvil and a ballpeen hammer. He bought a house on Hibiscus Island, at Miami, and hired a local character named John Tyler to be caretaker.

He bought a scratchy Victrola recording the Ninth Avenue "El" trains squealing around the corners so that he could fall asleep with the proper noise. In the Spring of 1942 he was back in New York lounging around city rooms, listening to ideas, when he got a letter from John Tyler that two mature heads of cabbage had been stolen at Hibiscus Island.

Nothing story

It was nothing. This was what he tapped out:

"It is the first time dishonesty has reared its sinister head on Hibiscus Island, except, of course, in gin rummy games. In the dead of night, mark you, when the righteous were safe in bed and no sound disturbed the quiet save perhaps the melodious warbling of Harry Richman in the club on the adjoining Palm Island, some miscreant stole into the garden and forcibly removed those cabbages from their peaceful home."

"We are greatly depressed by the incident not only because we are now short two cabbages, but because our faith in humanity is now slightly impaired. We had John Tyler install the garden last Spring on a lot outside the walls and at the time a skeptical neighbor approached us and remarked that it was an unsafe policy to leave even a garden in the open down there, what with the tourists from the North, and the hungry horse players and all, but we laughed and said that this attitude of distrust was one of the things wrong with the world."

"In the last war everybody was raising potatoes in no more soil than you can find under your fingernails. Somebody told us that vegetables could not be raised on Hibiscus Island and we knew very well that John Tyler could raise toupces on bald heads if he got enough rain."

"So we told him to make a garden outside the walls because in warm weather he likes to take his siestas under a big rubber tree and we never care to propose any enterprises which might disturb John's rest. Among the vegetables he raised were those cabbages and he was very proud of them and favored us with a formal statement of their progress."

"We named them Nip and Tuck. We had dreams of being pointed out to the tourists by the admiring natives, who would say: 'There goes Runyon, the cabbage king of Hibiscus Island.' Thus the abduction of the cabbages comes to us in the nature of a calamity. In fact, we consider it a mean trick."

"John is somewhat reserved in offering any theories as to the perpetrator of the outrage, but he mentions that there were footprints in the vicinity of the crime that might have been made in shoes such as are worn by ladies."

"This would seem to remove suspicion from Sidney the Rat, who was naturally our first thought. In all his dark excursions, in all his long career of felony, Sidney has never yet been known to wear ladies' shoes. To tell the truth, Sidney is such a bold villain that he generally goes around barefooted, disdaining any disguise of his tracks."

Take in the garden

"A plaster cast has been made of the footprints in the garden and will be forwarded to the FBI, which is pretty cute in running down clues like that. Meantime, we have instructed John Tyler to take the garden in at night."

Damon Runyon sat back, the column almost finished. He blinked at a wall through rimless glasses, begging his brain for a last line. He needed something to close out the story of the two stolen cabbages. Ideas fitted in and out like old stereopticon slides. Then he had it and he turned his crossed legs away from the desk to peek out the final words.

"If it was a lady who copped those cabbages, we think she might at least have had the courtesy to wait until we got back to Hibiscus Island and then come around with her spoils accompanied by a couple of slabs of nice corned beef. We are not hard to get along with over a portion of corned beef and cabbage."

McGovern wins

Hubert Humphrey reportedly has been counting on a smashing victory over George McGovern in the TV debates in order to turn the tide in California. After watching the first one, you have to say tough luck, Hubert.

Sen. Humphrey has the issues. Sen. McGovern's proposals on defense spending are completely unrealistic. Just to begin with, he could not possibly honor our NATO commitments with the cuts in carrier strength he has proposed. Humphrey is also correct in his assertion that McGovern's welfare proposals would be frightfully expensive, and that the burden of the whole scheme would be borne by the American middle class.

But McGovern won esthetically. He won in the sense that most TV viewers will say, as between the two of them, that I like McGovern better.

Humphrey is tricky

Why? First of all, in his tactics, Humphrey moved over the line between tough debating and demagoguery. McGovern's welfare proposals are bad enough. Giving $1,000 to everyone in the country over the age of zero would cost, most experts think, 40 to 45 billion dollars. McGovern has no hope of raising that sum. But Humphrey could not leave it at that. He had to resurrect an old bill McGovern introduced into the Senate agenda, sponsored by the Welfare Rights Association, but specifically not supported by McGovern. Price tag on that one: $72 billion. But McGovern disavowed it. Humphrey would have been on better ground attacking McGovern's own plan. The tactic made him seem like Tricky Hubie.

On defense Humphrey is probably sound, but the trouble is he has talked too much, and he has the fatal flaw of trying to please everyone he is talking to. McGovern was able to show that Humphrey the rhetorician was in a moment of lightheadedness able to propose even more drastic slashes in the defense budget than McGovern has put forth.

But all that, looking at the two men on the TV screen, is rather ho-hum. McGovern, visually, came off the larger and more powerful man, and also the more contemporaneous one.

About that last point, a little analysis. One of the salient psychic facts in America during the last generation has been the separation between self and role. A man may be a clerk, a filling station operator or a professor. That is his role. But, in America today, he is likely to have enough money, and therefore to be free enough, not to take his role with 100 per cent seriousness. The clerk is also a water-skier. The filling-station operator is a local golf champion. They may do their jobs very well, but stylistically they develop a certain detachment. This can be expressed as irony, or in some other way. But what they are saying is that I am more, larger than my role.

McGovern more appealing

McGovern expresses that emotion. Yes, he is a candidate for the presidency, and a serious one. He has also done his job well, building an organization and so on. But he is not grim. He can say, "Come on Hubert" or the equivalent.

Humphrey, in contrast, needs the job too badly. He tries to make those tedious debater's points, even when he is right.

Letters to the Editor

Spring concert thrills

Editor, The Record:

The East Stroudsburg Area elementary schools' Music Departments presented their annual spring concert the evening of May 25. To those of us who were there, it was indeed "a grand night for music". To all you others, you missed out again on a wonderful entertaining evening with our area's young people.

With a song on their lips, the combined choruses of the J.M. Hill, Smithfield and Middle, Smithfield Schools entered the brightly decorated auditorium. The theatrics with "It's A Grand Night For Singing" was different and splendidly done.

A special thanks to Miss Marguerite Cramer, Miss Dortha Poschadel and Miss Mary Miller for a job "well done". Their efforts were certainly appreciated by those attending. The selections were well chosen and the performance reflected their teaching abilities through the heart-warming student response in good music.

"Today", "Yellow Bird", "Born Free", "Jesus Walked This Lonesome Valley", "Sing A Rainbow" and "It's A Small World" were just some of the songs that for a moment cast many of us backwards to that day when we once knew the heart thump and nervous feelings of a performer. Something of that moment was re-kindled and in this union of music and memory a performance truly captures the listener.

Now, the difficult task. What can be said about another outstanding band concert from the young and very talented musicians under the direction of Mr. Paul Hubbell? This instructor never fails to give us much more than you would expect from so many young people. Their sparkling show gave musical testimony to his abilities as a moulder and master in the teaching of young musicians.

The "Grand March" keyed us to the sounds of another "grand band". The sounds never faltered as they continued on into "Scherzo For Woodwinds" and the "Turkish March". Then, something different. A small group from the band gave us a clarinet choir presentation of "Water Music". Martha Huddleston, Renee Kulba, Tina Palmisano, Kelly Flanagan, Helen Lesoine, LuAnn Alspach, Ellen Long and Kathy Brhm were the members who did such a fine job without any assistance from the remainder of the band.

These young musicians had to "go it alone". This type of performance was to allow a few keen artists to really prove their training. Just another example reflecting the teacher's talents to not only teach music but instill poise and self-confidence as well. You can tell that the education given to the young people was something to be desired rather than dreaded when the students will stand out from the rest and perform.

Being a band member must mean more than just learning to read music and blowing air through a horn. Indications give support to a bigger and better approach to everything you do by being a part of something good and enriching the lives of those your performance touches.

If, through the efforts of the music departments, the students carry forward some small appreciation of good music into later life they will then reflect back and realize how lucky they were to have such fine teachers. Many times the teacher is unaware of the praise and gratitude never mentioned but thought their way long after the pupil is gone.

I don't believe a teacher will ever completely know the results of their efforts in whatever area of student responsibility they may have. We know you try to do your best and the audience's standing ovation was only one small indication to you of our complete enjoyment of another memorable evening with youth and music.

Thank you one and all for another good year in musical education culminating in another excellent spring concert.

Sincerely believes in humanity

Editor, The Record:

I regret the letter of Mrs. Beger which condemns one who sincerely believes in humanity. I regret even further the society of which Beger is a part, but such is the dying reality.

I will not be a slave to an economy and a government which depends on human suffering for its very existence, a society which finds justification in paying taxes to pay for international murder because the dividends are blue chip.

History disclaims your accusations soundly and defiantly, Mrs. Beger, and those of equal mind. Mind you, though, I make no pretense that only we are at wrong. There are many others who are as equally responsible for what is occurring. Yet it is the United States which has assumed the role of colonialist, not France. It is the United States which is occupying foreign territory in Indo-China, not the Soviet Union nor the People's Republic of China.

It is the United States which continues to support a dictatorship unworthy of the respect of its own people, who live under a constant fear of reprisal and prison for wanting a peace after 25 years of war, and no one else. It is the United States which is responsible for the greatest aerial holocaust the world has ever witnessed, and no one else.

Why are you people still taken in by the false idealism of official phrasemongers? It has been said that every nation has the rulers it wants and deserves? At this instant a more honest phrase has not been sounded.

Ask yourself, ask yourself with your conscience, Mrs. Beger — Why? Why the nearly 50,000 American dead? Why the continued bombing of a people who pose no military threat to our shores? Is it to liberate the Vietnamese people, to give them freedom, democracy, and peace? Is that what 25 years of madness has been for?

At the present juncture a slight humiliation, a concession, a humane impulse can do us no harm! How, when we have befouled ourselves so thoroughly with blood, can we worry about petty national vanities? Stop deceiving yourself, Begers of America, the crime is to great, the evidence obvious. Chu hoi, people! Come to the open arms of humanity or resign from it. Do not wait for the inevitable judgement. The next course of action, Mrs. Beger, is perfectly clear.

Arms treaty will pass

Ratification of Nuclear Arms Treaty. The White House has good reason to be confident that the Nixon-Brezhnev agreement will get the necessary two-thirds Senate approval. They have counted heads and see nothing near to the 34 votes which would be needed to defeat it.

There will be full-length hearings by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, but this will be one matter on which its usual anti-Administration majority will be decisively with the President.

There will be flashes of sharp opposition from some conservative senators and retired military leaders, but it is evident that this capstone of the Moscow summit reflects dominant opinion in the country and in both parties in Congress.

The Administration's Strong Position. President Nixon knew from the start that a U.S.-Soviet nuclear arms pact, which he would deem acceptable, could only be defeated in the Senate if the nation's top military leaders strongly opposed its terms.

This is why Nixon brought the Joint Chiefs of Staff into the middle of all the advanced planning for SALT. They shared in developing the U.S. negotiating position. Further, Nixon put the actual negotiating into the hands of a trusted, hard-line diplomat, Ambassador Gerard C. Smith, who has the confidence of the military.

The Joint Chiefs will collectively and individually support ratification with one warning — that the United States must use the provisions of the treaty which permit both sides to exchange outdated nuclear weapons for more advanced nuclear weapons.

Is the Cold War Now Over? The candid answer is no, but it has been considerably contained. There are still some very sensitive areas of the world where U.S.-Soviet confrontations cannot be ruled out, as in the Middle East.

But the Nixon-Brezhnev meeting made large headway in removing some major causes of the cold war, not just reducing tension. The joint enterprises in space, science, environment, medicine and arms control could become constructively habit-forming.

How Nixon Planned the Moscow Summit.

Every U.S.-Soviet summit conference, including the two at which Britain and France were also present, has either accomplished nothing or left things worse than they were before.

There have been five such since the end of World War II: Geneva, Paris, Camp David, Vienna and Glassboro. They were all futile.

What made the Nixon-Brezhnev meeting different? Both sides had learned from past experience, and there was readiness to cooperate.

But Nixon applied two of his own concepts of summitry which paid off. He felt that details, and then negotiations, on every issue the summit would cover were essential to success. Example: Thirty months of advanced negotiation went into the arms agreement. Nixon also believed that some delicate issues could only be resolved at the top with the Soviets.

This is exactly what happened. The advanced SALT talks made agreement possible, but Brezhnev and Nixon alone were able to resolve three areas of differences.

Ann Landers

More hate around?

Dear Ann Landers: When I was nine years old I lost my father in a truck accident and now I am 16. After the accident my cousin told me I was lucky — that she hated her dad and wished it had been him. I told her if she ever said that to me again I'd sock her.

father — or both. I view this as a tragedy not only because the kids suffer, but their parents as well.

The best course of action is to try to re-establish communication at the point where it broke down. Sometimes the whole family must get counseling in order to accomplish this. If certain members refuse, the ones who recognize the need should go regardless.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband is having an affair with his secretary. This has been going on for over a year, but I've been looking the other way, hoping it would wear itself out. I see nothing to be gained by confronting him, nor do I have any intention of asking him to make a choice.

Quincy Teen

Dear Q.: I don't know if there is more hate for older people than there used to be, but kids are more outspoken about their feelings. Every day I receive at least a dozen letters from teenagers who say they hate their mother or she resign from her job. I believe this would be humiliating to my husband and place me in the position of having to "take steps" should she refuse. My mother-in-law also wants me to sit down with the two boys and explain the situation "objectively."

I've shed a bucket of tears over this mess and am confused and sick at heart. Advise me, please.

Insomnia in Idaho

Dear Ida: You've already had too much advice. All bad. Don't telephone the secretary. Don't have any summit meetings with the children. Hold your head up. Issue no ultimatums. If your mother-in-law continues to harangue you, tell her to butt out.

Dear Ann Landers: I hope it's not too late to put in my two cents worth for the mother with the two beautiful daughters who sat home a lot because they were too tall for most guys. I know who wrote that letter and I'd like to remind her of the time I arrived at the house and she told me in very plain language she would not allow her daughter to be seen with a long-haired gorilla. Then she shut the door in my face.

The girl was nice and fairly attractive, but her mother's mouth was her downfall. I never called her again. What do you think of a 17-year-old who would let her mother make such decisions for her?

6'2" in Alabama

Dear 6'2": I'm not sure the girl "let" her. It sounds as if mama is the take-over type and she took over. I feel sorry for her daughter.

Teddy Kennedy virtually created George McGovern; now George won't listen to Teddy's advice; suspects it's camouflage for the move-in even as Bobby swooped in on Gene McCarthy the last Kennedy-try. These cars are parked on a lot of broken beer bottles.

Over 350,000 empties were crushed to make this experimental paving material.

It's called "glasphalt." No hare-brained stunt. It's a serious attempt by one West Coast brewer to find a new use for old glass. Others are trying to process it into building blocks, sewer tiles and insulation wool. Meanwhile, 10 per cent of our old glass is being recycled into new. And glass makers are aiming for 30 per cent!

Whatever the solutions, it's going to take a lot of power to make them happen. And you can bet electric power will be called for more times than not. Lots of it.

Crush just last year's glass empties into glasphalt, and there goes as much electricity as it takes to light a city of 90,000 for almost five years.

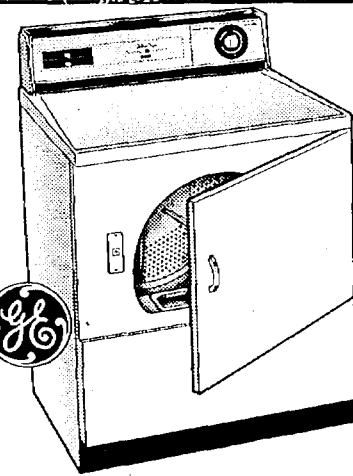

Next, consider that glass is only 6 per cent of our waste problem. Cans, plastics, paper, cars, you name it. All must be dealt with.

Our country's ability to do the work that needs to be done will depend on an adequate supply of electricity. There's no time to waste.

New generating facilities must be built, and built in a way compatible with our environment.

We'll continue working to do this. But we need your understanding today to meet tomorrow's needs.

Hospital without walls begins to take shape here

EAST STROUDSBURG — The hospital-without-walls concept has begun to take more definite shape in Monroe County.

The informal committee which has been investigating the possibility of establishing a home health care service here, meeting at the General Hospital of Monroe County, elected Mrs. Harold S. Pond Jr. as chairman; William Treible of the hospital staff as vice chairman, and Mrs. Alan Gould Jr. as secretary.

Study assignments were broken down for committee work and reports of similar plans in other places were reviewed.

The idea behind the hospital-without-walls is to cut down on the length of time a patient must stay in the hospital by providing the same skilled professional services he needs in his own home.

Treible reported on the home health plans discussion at the Hospital Conference in Atlantic City where administrators saw in it a hopeful solution to spiraling hospital costs and shortages of hospital beds.

Committee members visited Rochester, N.Y., where the "Rochester Plan" originated and reported on the steps by which it had been achieved. They have also visited Gnadon Huetten, in the process of establishing such a plan, and Bryn Mawr Hospital where it is in operation.

Under the supervision of the attending physician, a plan of treatment is set up and all of the acute treatment and supportive skilled services which would be available at the hospital are given the patient at home.

Bert Sears, representative from Blue Cross of Northeastern Pennsylvania, listed some of the services for which Blue Cross and Blue Shield would pay including nursing care, injections, physical therapy, speech therapy, laboratory tests, ambulance service, dietary set up, oxygen treatment, medical treatment, social worker.

"These are for skilled services, a continuation of those which the patient would receive in the hospital," he emphasized, "not for custodial care."

These services are provided without affecting the hospital.

days allowed under the Blue Cross plans, and without additional costs, he said. However, he also warned that some group insurance contracts negotiated by labor and management may not cover home care.

Strong community support, regular review of all cases by the utilization committee, and the cooperation of the attending physician were given as key factors in the success of any home health care plan.

It's benefits are not only financial (in Rochester last year home health care cost averaged $15.05 a day compared to $100 a day in the hospital and $30 a day in a nursing home) but permits the patient to stay in surroundings he loves and among his friends and family.

Mrs. Pond will name a committee to survey current cases in the hospital to see how many might benefit from such a plan, a committee to suggest additional names for an advisory committee representing all segments of the community.

The bidding:
 East 1NT West 3NT
 Opening lead — jack of hearts.

Signals are either positive or negative. Thus, if your partner on defense leads the king of a suit and you have the A-7-2, you can ask him to continue the suit by making a positive signal with the seven, or to discontinue the suit by making a negative signal with the deuce.

If you are void of a suit that is led, you can also signal positively or negatively by the size of your discard in some other suit. Such signals are highly important for a proper conduct of the defense. In general, a positive signal telling partner which suit to lead is more illuminating than a negative signal which merely tells him which suit not to lead. At the same time, however, a combination of negative signals can, together, add up to a positive signal, as illustrated in this deal.

West leads the jack of hearts, dummy winning with the king as East follows with the deuce. Declarer plays a low diamond to the king, followed by the ten and another diamond, West winning the last one with the ace.

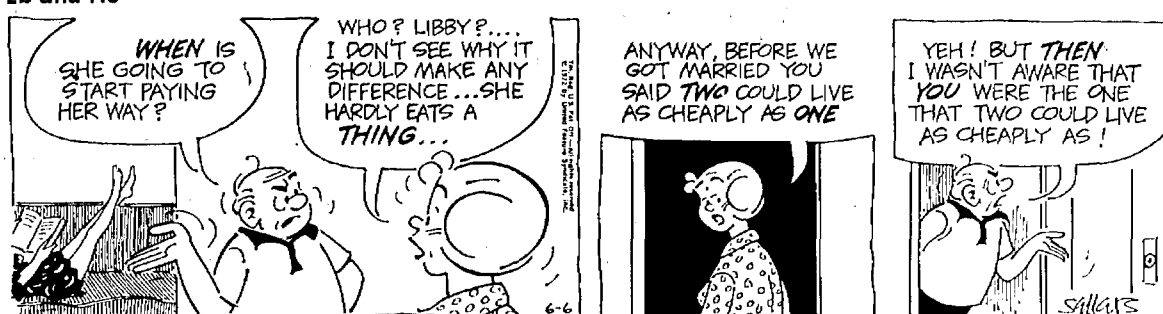

East must discard on the third diamond, and his choice of plays is highly crucial to the defense. If he signals with the nine or ten of spades, it costs him the contract even though West shifts to that suit. South's eight is a fourth-round stopper and he makes three notrump.

But if East discards the club deuce on the third diamond, the defense triumphs when West leads a spade; in fact, South goes down two. A spade shift by West at this point is not difficult. With East expressing disinterest in hearts and clubs by playing the deuce of both suits, he is inferentially suggesting a spade lead. All that West has to do is conform to partner's suggested method of defense.

McDade begins search for support in Monroe County

BY GLENN RITT
Washington Bureau
WASHINGTON — "Monroe County voters just don't know me."

For a congressman, such a concession could lead to panic. But, in this year of massive const-to-const redistricting, Rep. Joseph M. McDade, R-10, is joined by a bevy of House colleagues tackling the same problems of candidate recognition.

McDade, a Scranton lawyer and five-term congressman, enters Monroe County for the first time under Pennsylvania's new reapportionment map. He will be soliciting the votes of constituents who probably don't recognize his name, no less his stands on the war, Tocks Island, farm subsidies or even apple pie.

"Monroe County is unique to my district, and even to the state as a whole," said McDade last week. "Essentially, it is a fast-growing, heavily-visited tourist area."

McDade's present congressional District includes a group of rural, farm counties (populated by Republican Scotch-Irish voters) and industrialized Scranton.

Monroe's residents, said McDade, for the most part don't get involved in Lackawanna County affairs. They don't read the Scranton press, but depend more on The Pocono Record or New York Times.

Television and radio broadcasts from his hometown, said McDade, rarely invades the isolated mountain regions of Monroe. Instead, New York and Philadelphia stations reach the county's voters.

Because of Monroe's relative isolation, McDade has been forced to move beyond his traditional legislative stamping grounds. He hopes to meet with most of the county's 33,000 voters by November.

"I've campaigned in Monroe five times since redistricting," he reported.

Beyond this, McDade has had to study subjects which, until this year, were of only marginal legislative interest. He has given top priority status, for example, to gypsy moths and Tocks Island.

A stocky, pleasant man, McDade at 41 is a legislator who often depends on the hand-around-the-shoulder, face-to-face approach. By most political standards, he is a middle-of-the-road Republican, but he, himself, reacts with a wry grin when confronted with such a facile classification.

The 10th District representative became active in politics in 1960, during the congressional campaign of his original mentor, William Scranton.

When Scranton won the governorship two years later, McDade stepped up and replaced him in Congress. He has remained there since.

McDade often says he has "never replaced the governor." He approaches the job in his own style. He concedes though that the Scranton footsteps are large, but not inhibiting.

That first campaign in 1962, and the next one in 1964 were closely-contested. But, after slim victories, life has been more comfortable for McDade. In 1968 and 1970, he won two thirds of the total district vote, and McDade now boasts that he carried Lackawanna County by 25,000 votes, the largest plurality ever recorded there.

In Congress, McDade is a member of the powerful Appropriations Committee. He serves on the Housing and Urban Development Sub committee, as well as sub-panels dealing with space, science and interior. He is the 11th ranking Republican on the full committee.

McDade's moderate image is created in part by his failure to gain superlative ratings from the two groups representing the most liberal and most conservative ideologies in the U.S., respectively — the Americans for Democratic Action (ADA) and Americans for Conservative Action (ACA).

ADA, whose pantheon includes such liberals as John Kenneth Galbraith, Arthur Schlesinger Jr., and Allard Lowenstein, rates McDade with a 56. ACA, which measures legislators according to their stand against Communism, rates the Pennsylvania congressman with a 39 per cent.

In Congress during the past two years, McDade managed to remain relatively independent. In 1971, he voted during 92 per cent of all recorded roll calls. During the same period, he supported President Nixon's own stand on particular legislation 67 per cent of the time.

This percentage proved equal to that of the average held by all northeastern Republican congressmen.

The Pennsylvania congressman also voted in favor of the Cooper-Church amendment in 1970, which limited Presidential authority in conducting military operations in Cambodia.

Last November, McDade, joining a growing list of Northern legislators, voted in favor of the so-called Broomfield busing amendment. This proposal, which passed the House, called for postponement of court orders requiring busing for racial balance until all appeals in court were exhausted.

McDade, this year, fortified the stand by insisting, along with the majority in the House, that no federal funds be used for busing until every appeals court rules on the issue.

McDade also has come out in favor of a Constitutional amendment supporting prayer in school.

As November fast approaches, McDade plans to campaign, as most incumbents do, on his record. He is relying also on his membership in the House Appropriations Committee.

The 10th District congressman sees the war and Tocks Island as key campaign issues. To date, though, he reports he has not been strongly challenged by either primary or general election opponents.

Reflecting back several weeks, McDade was less-than-unequivocal about President Nixon's mining of Haiphong Harbor. "It was a fail accomplishment," said McDade, "done without Congressional consultation."

But, McDade would not criticize the move, saying rather that it was a "tremendous risk on the part of the president... but we have some people (in Vietnam) in a very vulnerable position."

"I'd be willing to vote tomorrow for a cut-off of funds, providing the North Vietnamese return our POW's," said McDade.

Locally, gypsy moths and Tocks Island concern the congressman most. He is working actively within his own Interior Appropriations Subcommittee to cultivate support for the U.S. Forest Service.

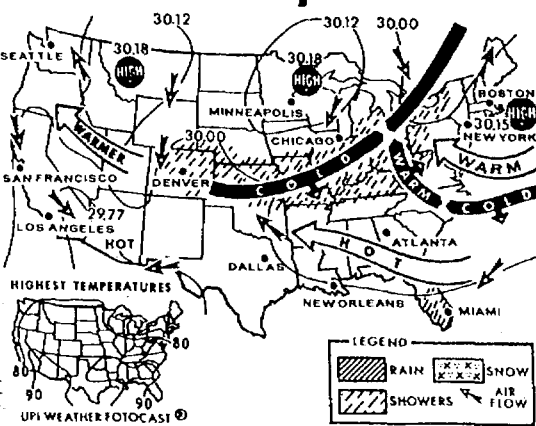

Tocks is a complicated subject, and McDade believes more information is needed before a final determination can be made one way or the other.

"I can't at this time see how I can support construction of the dam if the systems the Council on Environmental Quality (CEQ) says must be built, aren't," says McDade.

The Congressman added that New Jersey Gov. William Cahill's recent reservations concerning the dam push construction further to "the negative."

"If New Jersey or New York raise serious questions as to their financial commitment," he noted, "this sharpens the issue enormously."

E.S. district revises tax rates

By CONRAD GROVE
Pocono Record Reporter

EAST STROUDSBURG — The East Stroudsburg School Board proposed millage rates of $9.5 for Monroe County and 79 for Pike Monday night to finance its nearly $3.1 million budget next year.

Two weeks ago, the directors picked different tax rates for each of the district's six municipalities in an attempt to balance sharply varying percentages of market value to assessed value.

The action then was heralded as "fairer". But the action Monday night is legal.

The other was not.

Under a 1970 amendment to the School Code, board solicitor Alex Bensinger originally said directors could impose the mismatched rates.

A 1971 amendment, however, repealed that. Bensinger took full responsibility for the mistake and apologized publicly to directors.

The ruling means property owners in East Stroudsburg borough lost 7.5 mills and residents of Smithfield Township 3.5 mills — which they would have saved under the first proposal.

For Middle Smithfield Township property owners, the move drops them from the 66 first set, while Price Township decreases from 83.

Lehman Township was originally figured at 78 mills. Porter Township people have nothing to rejoice or moan about, since the first decision set millage at the original 79 just adopted.

Re-evaluation needed

Board President Irving Sommer said the decision reaffirms the need for accurate re-evaluation of county properties, a measure scheduled to be remedied this summer since the Monroe County Commissioners have earmarked $250,000 for that purpose.

Based on state tax equalization board percentages, this is how the district shapes up in its ratio of assessed value to market value:

East Stroudsburg, 34.8; Middle Smithfield, 27.3; Price, 21.7; Smithfield, 32.2; Lehman, 23.1 and Porter, 22.7.

Without boosting the millage to flat rates, the other alternative for directors would have been property by property assessments. Directors agreed that was out of the question, since the budget must be adopted by June 30.

The verdict to increase rates met with split decisions for each county. Directors voted 5-3 in favor of the 1.5 mill raise for Monroe and 5-4 for the Pike hike.

The unanimous judgment two weeks ago would have raised slightly more than $1.7 million through property taxes. Monday's opinion will give a property tax yield of $1,665,489.

Balance figured

During those 14 days, district officials have figured a $36,000 balance will be left at fiscal year's end, and $21,000 will come from state reimbursement for the district's support of the Monroe County Area Vocational-Technical School.

Besides the crazy-quilt pattern percentage of assessed value to market value in the six municipalities, the heavy local support needed is blamed on the Tocks Island project.

Presently, about seven per cent of the district's assessed valuation has been purchased by the federal government.

Washington won't chip in its fair share, however, until purchases total 10 per cent, when it will then yield about $100,000 yearly.

The budget, $400,000 higher than this year's, shows its biggest rise in instructional costs, from $1.5 million to almost $1.8 million. Plant operation, the second largest single expenditure, is estimated to increase $36,000 to $268,834.

Commissioners receive law enforcement scheme

STROUDSBURG — A law enforcement scheme splitting the county into three districts manned by 75 officers has been suggested to the Monroe County Commissioners.

Gerard Fulcher, director of the Crime and Justice Council in Reading, sent the plan to the commissioners, who Monday said they would pass the information on to law enforcement authorities in the county for review.

An unsolicited offer to design "county regional police districts" for Monroe County came to the commissioners in late May. In return, the commissioners sent Fulcher the information he requested on present police powers in the county.

His scheme; to lump townships together in three districts by contracting among municipalities with one chief per district and a police commission to rule over law enforcement operations.

To demonstrate his principle, Fulcher outlined three districts for Monroe County, but the districts were purely demonstrable and artificial. How Monroe County would use Fulcher's principle is up to county officials.

His principle is simple. It is consolidation. Fulcher stated, "fragmentation of police effort was one of the most severe criticisms which resulted from the in-depth studies of the Presidential Commissions of the mid-sixties."

To overcome fragmentation Fulcher is simply offering a means to combine municipal police forces into larger districts through contract among the municipalities.

Fulcher's plan stops short of a county-wide police force. He stated the consolidation plan would be immediately more expensive by less costly in the long run, provide service now lacking, attract federal money and distribute police cost throughout the county.

The Monroe County Commissioners did not indicate they would accept the report, but said they would await local law enforcement opinion before going any further.

In another communication from the Environmental Protection Agency the county's plan to abandon total landfill and search out alternate means of solid waste disposal was given encouragement.

The EPA granted the county authority to expend money not spent last year on solid waste management from a grant arranged through the Tocks Island Regional Advisory Council.

A study conducted by Gannett-Fleming-Corddry and Carpenter examining volume reduction and residue disposal was offered for Monroe County's use by the EPA if the county will foot the bill for subsurface investigations.

The entire matter will go to another county to provide a report on investigations into the use of landfill funded by their grant before the commissioners decided landfill was not the total answer. The report is due July 31.

Again, the commissioners will pass to the Solid Waste Advisory Committee.

Four vo-tech teachers quit before school even opens

By A.P. CESARE
Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — Four teachers hired for the Monroe County Area Vocational-Technical School have resigned before they even started.

The reason — money. That was the explanation given by executive director Walter E. Brown. The newly elected director told the joint committee Monday night during a regular meeting of the group that "by and large it was money."

The joint committee publicly released its salary schedule at the meeting. Directors had stated previously this information wouldn't be provided until the four Monroe County school districts ratified their own contracts.

At this time, only Pleasant Valley has yet to reach accord, while East Stroudsburg, Stroudsburg and Pocono Mountain are still negotiating.

The contract sets a range from $7,300 for beginners to $11,400 to a teacher with a master's degree and 30 additional credits — and 10 years of experience.

The resignations received came from Ronald Weber, carpentry, at a salary of $9,400; George Kocher, auto body, at $9,600; David Feather, data processing, $8,400; and Douglas W. Henry, auto mechanic, $9,400.

Joseph J. Voorhees, a graduate of Pocono Mountain Joint High School, was named to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Feather.

Water standards mandated

MILFORD — The Pike County taxpayers will be required to contribute toward the maintenance of high water quality standards in the Tocks Island region regardless of the Delaware River Basin Commission's (DRBC) proposed tri-state sewerage system, it was learned Monday.

The Pike County Commissioners, at their Monday meeting, read a DRBC reply to their resolution opposing construction of a mammoth $360 million system.

"The Commission (DRBC) has no desire whatever to impose upon the region an unsound system of collecting and treating wastes nor to establish any cost or tax liability on the part of the local governments and citizens that is not equitable," contended DRBC Executive Director James F. Wright in the letter.

"We wish to work closely with the county agencies in the region so that the final outcome may be soundly based and acceptable to the people most immediately affected."

"At the same time, you and other local government officials must realize that high levels of pollution abatement are being required throughout the nation and will be enforced."

"This obligation will fall upon the local governments in the Tocks Island area no less than in other parts of the country, and will exist as an obligation regardless of whether a large regional system is constructed. Obviously, therefore, some payment will be required of the taxpayers of Pike County one way or the other."

In the letter, Wright concluded, "It is my hope that a regional scheme, developed in close cooperation with local governments, will produce a least-cost solution that is equitable in the eyes of local citizens and which avoids the prospect of arbitrary across-the-board regulations that might otherwise be imposed."

Council appoints authority

MOUNT POCONO — Mount Pocono Borough Council Monday announced the appointment of five members to the newly formed Mount Pocono Municipal Authority.

Members of the authority include George Dowaldy, Edward Schmidt, Dr. William Thomas, Joseph Rodriguez, and Norton DeMars. Council has directed the authority to handle the sewage and water problems that are now confronting the borough.

Dave Carey, secretary of the council, noted that the authority would probably be empowered to deal with parks and recreational facilities in the future.

In other business, the opening of the borough pool was set for Sunday, June 25. The pool will be open seven days a week from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m., and will also be open Monday, Wednesday, and Friday from 10 a.m. until noon for swimming instruction. On Tuesday and Thursday there will be swimming from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. and on Saturday from 10 a.m. until noon.

Admittance for the entire summer season will cost $20 under the family membership plan, while 50 cents will be the daily fee per person.

ed, warning visitors to stay away from the water supply, but the signs had been torn down or simply ignored.

"We saw one guy camping right under a sign," Wilson said. He said he asked the camper if he had read the sign and then explained to him he was polluting borough drinking water.

Wilson said another camper told him the Park Service said he could camp there.

"We're going to have to protect the watershed," Wilson said, "I for one am going to holler like a son-of-a-gun if we have to go on well water all the time. It's just not right that these people should be polluting our water supply."

Stating it is almost impossible for the borough to police the watershed, suggestions from the council were requested by Wilson.

The idea of placing barbed wire around the watershed was rejected when it was decided campers would simply go under or over the wire.

Council decided to write to the Park Service and ask them to police the supply.

"Other than that, I guess the next thing to do is take police up there and fine them," Wilson said, "but I'd hate to do it."

Campers foul drinking water

DELAWARE WATER GAP — Summer visitors dunking their tired feet, dirty dishes, panting dogs and other debris in the borough's drinking water are causing problems for Delaware Water Gap.

Borough Council President John Wilson reported Monday he spent Memorial Day Weekend trekking the streams feeding the borough's watershed to chase about 1,000 campers from the woodlands surrounding the water supply.

The tiny borough uses the natural waters feeding a collection point in the mountains southwest of the borough as an alternative to well-water for reasons of cost and water quality.

Wilson said the watershed had to be closed over the holiday weekend and the borough used well-water to prevent pollution.

"If we hadn't gone up there and turned it off, we would have had some sick people in this town," Wilson said.

A $30,000 well could pump water enough to serve the borough, but according to Wilson the water from the well is hard and would be costly to the borough — running about $500 a month to pump.

Wilson said the land around the watershed had been post-

Squatter eluding authorities

SHAWNEE-on-DELAWARE — Federal and state authorities are still searching for a Watchung, N.J. man who allegedly struck a federal officer with a gun butt and made an apparent attempt to shoot him afterwards in the Tocks Island project area here Friday night.

The man, identified as James Baldwin, has so far managed to elude Federal Bureau of Investigation agents and Pennsylvania State Police.

He allegedly hit National Park Service Ranger Andrew Hutchison in the face with the butt of a shotgun and then pointed the weapon at him during a confrontation late Friday.

Federal charges filed Monday in U.S. District Court, Scranton, cite Baldwin with assaulting a federal officer. The state police have issued a warrant for his arrest charging aggravated assault and battery.

The confrontation, between Hutchison and Baldwin, who was described as "a relatively new squatter," came about after a fire of undetermined origin leveled an unoccupied cabin in the "old Yeller development" of the Tocks area.

Bushkill Firemen told the ranger there were two "suspicious" persons at the scene and Hutchison came to detain them until state police could arrive to question them.

One of the two unidentified men left the scene and later returned with the gun-toting Baldwin and about three or four other people identified only as squatters. The incident then followed.

Polk approves wage tax credit

By MAUREEN RUFÉ
Pocono Record Reporter

KRESEVILLE — The Polk Township Supervisors decided Monday night to offer a partial wage tax credit to residents who work in New Jersey and paid income tax to that state last year.

Under Act 511, the "tax anything law" in Pennsylvania, residents who paid income tax to another state are entitled to the one per cent tax they paid to their local municipality during the same period of time.

Polk residents wishing a credit toward their 1972 wage taxes should file a claim with the township tax collector, Mrs. Winifred Beers.

In order to receive a tax credit, residents will have to submit a cancelled check and a copy of the New Jersey income tax form to the Polk Township Earned Income Tax Bureau.

Mrs. Beers asked the township solicitor, Atty. Lester Brown, if any action could be taken regarding delinquent wage taxes. Brown said he would check the appropriate ordinance on this matter.

A representative from Blue Ridge Cable Television Co., appeared before the Polk board asking the supervisors to sign a letter which was addressed to the Federal Communications Commission.

The memorandum stated that the township has approved Blue Ridge's application to install its services in the township.

The spokesman said that since an initial resolution was passed by Polk on Feb. 7, the FCC has required all cable television companies to meet tougher standards.

In order to obtain a required certificate of compliance from the FCC, a letter from the township must be forwarded showing the company has the right to operate in the area.

Due to the legal holiday on July 3, the Polk supervisors will hold their next board meeting at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, July 5 at the Polk Elementary School.

Gilbert resident John Nash asked supervisors to repair the township road which runs by his home. He claimed the road is continually washed out and is almost impossible to travel.

A discussion was held concerning the latest developments in the proposed takeover of the West End Park by Chestnut Hill, Eldred, and Polk Townships.

The board said until it receives a tentative written proposal on the takeover from the county, it could not take further action on the matter.

The budget will be up for adoption at a special meeting set for 8 p.m. Monday, June 26 in the conference room.

Thieves hit W.T. Grant; take shot at store guard

By SKIP TAGGART
Pocono Record Reporter

EAST STROUDSBURG — The new W.T. Grant store in East Stroudsburg was broken into sometime late Saturday night or early Sunday morning, according to East Stroudsburg Police, and an undetermined amount of merchandise was taken, including guns and ammunition.

The building was re-entered by two thieves Monday morning but they were confronted by an armed guard and they shot at him. Both were described as negroes.

The bullet missed guard Robert Lazevnick by only a few feet and he returned the fire, struck the steel door through which they had entered about waist high and sent the two scrambling out of the building.

He pursued them along the back of the building and fired again. He heard something drop and thought he might have hit one of the men. The noise he heard later turned out to be the sound of the thief's weapon, a .357 magnum, hitting the ground. It was recovered and sent to the state police crime laboratory for examination.

The first burglary was discovered by East Stroudsburg Police Sunday morning when they noticed a plywood panel had been removed from the rear of the building. They investigated further and found a steel door inside the false wall had been pried open. They entered the building and found a number of showcases broken into and then called a store official.

W.T. Grant's assistant store manager, Russell Hunter, made a partial inventory of the missing items, which included eight rifles, a shotgun, several scopes for the weapons and about 30 boxes of ammunition.

The jewelry and camera showcases had also been broken into and items removed. More merchandise was thought removed but the inventory is still incomplete.

Lazevnick was called in for duty by Hunter Sunday night and at 1:20 a.m. he really earned his paycheck.

"I was in the television section of the store when I heard a noise out back," said Lazevnick. "It's a new building and there are a lot of strange noises with it settling and all, but I went back to take a look."

The guard took up a position in the store room near a door the noises were coming from and waited. Then the door opened and a man, described as a negro about 6 feet, three inches tall and weighing about 180 pounds, entered.

"I said 'Stop, police!'" related Lazevnick. The man had both his hands in plain view but suddenly a shot rang out from behind him. It was apparently fired by his accomplice.

"It really surprised me because I could see his hands. I returned the fire and took cover. Then I followed them out the back and squeezed off another shot as they were running toward Route 80. I think I hit one and that's when I heard something drop. When the police got there we found the .357 on the ground."

The East Stroudsburg investigators also recovered a pair of black gloves, a pair of wire cutting pliers and a lug wrench. The latter they believe was used to pry the plywood covering from the wall. All the evidence has been sent to the state police crime laboratory.

The bullet fired at Lazevnick was also recovered and will undergo a ballistics check.

Hunter said he has managed a number of stores that have been broken into at one time or another but said, "this is the first time anyone ever shot at anybody."

County home resignations may spark investigation

STROUDSBURG — A raft of resignations at Pleasant Valley Manor last month caused concern at the monthly county salary board meeting Monday.

Noting four county employees at the county home had terminated their employment in recent weeks, Commissioner William F. Quinn said he knew the resignations would continue in the near future.

"I think there is something wrong out there because there are going to be more," Quinn said. "We should find out about it, because it can't be all over money."

Quinn speculated there might be a communications gap between employees and supervisors at Pleasant Valley Manor.

In other Salary Board action the following persons were added to the county payroll:

Romaine Price to the Assessor's Office for $180 bi-weekly, Carolyn Berwick to the Assessor's Office for $180 bi-weekly, Florence Klock to the custodial staff for $180 bi-weekly, Patricia Rose as a clerk-typist at $2.10 per hour.

Randall Drescher as special assistant to the Planning Commission at $200 bi-weekly, Fay Dorshimer to the Sheriff's Office at $170 bi-weekly, Mable Armstrong to the custodial staff at $194.80 bi-weekly.

Russell Stull as a guard at the jail at $21.05 per day, Marian Koerner as clerk-typist to the Children's Bureau at $222 bi-weekly.

And at the recommendation of County Treasurer Thomas Joyce, Joanne Wernet received a raise from $2.10 to $2.50 an hour.

USAC board to hear Grant's case

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UPI)—A special board of the United States Auto Club will convene today to hear car owner Dan Gurney's appeal of a decision taking second place in the Indianapolis '500' from one of his drivers, Jerry Grant.

Gurney admits the race rules were violated but contends the penalty dropping Grant from second to 12th place was too severe.

The USAC panel will be composed of three persons to be named by Association President Charles Brockman. Their identities were not to be announced until the hearing begins.

The hearing will be held behind closed doors.

Among those expected to be on hand were Gurney, Grant and George Bignotti, the chief mechanic for drivers Al Unser, Joe Leonard and Mario Andretti. Bignotti filed the original protest which resulted in Grant's demotion.

Grant was penalized for taking on fuel from the wrong pit—that of teammate Bobby Unser.

Gurney said Grant stopped with just 13 laps to go in the May 27 race to change a tire, but he wound up in Unser's pit instead of his own. Gasoline was pumped into his tank and he went on to finish second behind winner Mark Donohue.

Gurney conceded that the rules were violated when Unser's gas was put into Grant's racer, but contended that Grant already had enough fuel to finish before he made the unscheduled pit stop.

Chief Steward Harlan Fongler sustained Bignotti's protest and ruled Grant's finish could be 12th on the theory that when he took on Unser's gas, he was done racing for the day.

The difference between second and 12th place is about $72,000 in prize money.

No one has been paid for the second through 12th places pending the outcome of the appeal.

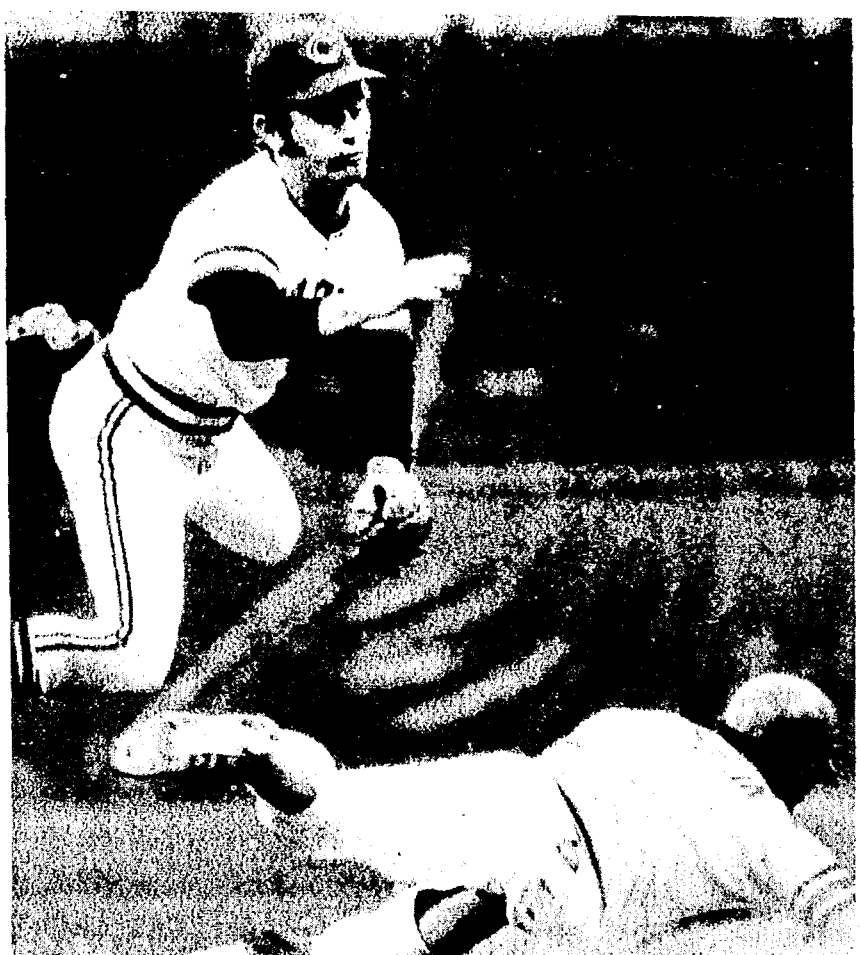

Darwin's theory: victory

BALTIMORE (UPI)—Bobby Darwin's sixth-inning double set the Baltimore Orioles down to their fourth straight defeat as the Minnesota Twins rallied for a 3-2 victory Monday night.

Brooks Robinson smacked his first homer of the season but it wasn't enough for loser Dave McNally, who gave up a two-run double to Eric Soderholm in the fourth inning before Darwin knocked home Harmon Killebrew in the sixth with the game-winning.

Dick Woodson struck out six and walked four while allowing five hits in eight innings to receive credit for his fourth victory. McNally, 5-5, lasted seven innings.

Linesmen also given more power

MONTREAL (UPI)—The joint rules committee of the National Hockey League announced at the opening session of the league's annual meeting Monday that the NHL would impose stiffer penalties on players using illegal sticks.

There was a great deal of controversy late last season when several players were charged with using illegal sticks. At that time, the league had a mandate to issue stiff penalties, but the player was not penalized during the game.

The new rules state that a player using an illegal stick will receive a two-minute minor penalty and be handed a $200 fine.

All sticks must conform to NHL standards, with the blade of the stick between two and three inches wide.

A new instrument to measure sticks has been devised by NHL officials and the game time keeper will be in charge of measuring if any question should arise.

The investigation will only be made if the opposing team questions the legality of any player's stick. False claims will cost the complaining team $100.

In another ruling, the linesmen who work the games with the referee have been handed the additional responsibility of halting play when a player is injured.

Formerly, the game continued until the referee blew his whistle to stop play for an injury.

The forty-day meetings move into high gear today, when the New York Islanders and Atlanta Flames each choose their 21 players in the expansion draft.

On Monday night, each club in the existing league filed a protected list of 15 players and two goaltenders.

The four clubs which lost their goalkeepers in the 1970 expansion draft had the option of having their netminders exempt from the goalkeeper claim.

California, Montreal, Philadelphia and St. Louis each lost goalies two years ago but Montreal will drop their option and allow goalie Phil Myre to be taken by the Atlanta Flames.

The loss of Myre will permit Montreal to fill in with another player, a forward or defenseman whom they have left unguarded in the expansion process.

No team can lose more than three players, including a goalie.

The new World Hockey Association has several of the NHL's general managers worried. Many of last year's players on the existing teams are already under WHA contract with multi-year deals and several players left off protected lists are reportedly signed with the teams in the new league.

Islanders' general manager Bill Torrey said, "naturally I am concerned about the WHA. We could choose players that have already signed with that league and I really feel that the NHL should offer us some protection in that direction."

Torrey added "I'll go to court if necessary to get the players that I choose in the expansion draft."

NHL President Clarence Campbell has indicated that the new teams will be taking a chance by drafting players who will not report to NHL clubs. "The 14 existing teams will not be held responsible for providing replacements."

On Thursday all 16 clubs will participate in the draft of amateur players with Atlanta and Long Island getting the first choice. There is no limit to the number of players that may be claimed by an NHL club.

Tough teacher

Bill Ruggiero is starting a new career only 10 miles down the road. But he admits its like going from night to day.

While Ruggiero was assistant football coach at Pen Argyl, the Green Knights had not only an outstanding record, but a winning attitude. As the new football coach at Bangor, Ruggiero finds the opposite.

Ruggiero, 31, takes over a team which has had three coaches in as many years. The Pen Argyl native takes over from Harry Powlus, who took the job for one year as more or less a favor to the school district.

Although Ruggiero admits the Bangor job is "a tremendous opportunity for a person starting out in head coaching," he realizes the problem is simple. It's called attitude.

"We have to change the attitude," he was saying the other day. "We have to develop pride and a winning spirit. Part of the problem is that the kids don't care. They're going to have to toe the line or they won't play for me."

"Kids are the same all over," the 1959 graduate of Pen Argyl High School said. "Give them some leeway and they'll take it. But the kids want discipline. It's no different at Bangor than it is at Pen Argyl."

Although last year's Bangor team went 3-7, Ruggiero feels "there's some pretty good material left." He says last year's team was "fundamentally poor," but is quick to absolve Powlus from blame.

"We need some good help from the assistants," he said. Right now he has none. "And we have to have as much help as possible in getting them."

Ruggiero, a 1963 graduate of Rutgers, narrows the basic problems at Bangor down to fundamentals and attitude.

"But," he adds, "if the attitude is straightened out, the fundamentals will take care of themselves."

Amateur in win at Tamiment golf

BUSHKILL — Leo Feldman, representing Fox Hills Country Club, West Pittston, shot a four-over par 76 Monday to win the eighth annual Angelo DeSanto Memorial Golf Tournament at Tamiment Country Club.

Feldman, one of 48 amateurs and 16 professionals participating, was the second amateur to win the event.

Four players tied for low professional honors with six-over par 78s. They were host professional Vince Yanovitch, Joe Stencik, teaching pro at Glen Brook Country Club; Steve Pembroke, head professional at Buck Hill Country Club; and Gene Yanovitch of Lords Valley Country Club.

Vince Yanovitch attributed the high scores to the wet fairways caused by recent rains. He added the 7,110-yard course has never played longer.

Low team gross was won by Lords Valley with a par 72. Members were George Michel, John Landers, Irv Ruden and Pro Gene Yanovitch. Shooting a 64 to take team net was the Tamiment team of Ray Steele, Jim Carr, Jim Geniner and Vince Yanovitch.

In a three-way tie for second place with 66 were Glen Brook (Harold Storm, Dave

Kingsmen end 13th

EVANSBURG — Pocono Central Catholic, participating for the first time, finished 13th Monday in the annual Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic Assn. golf tournament.

Bob Miller shot an 85-93-178 for the Kingsmen while Pete FitzSimmons shot a 95-92-187.

The first 18 holes were played at the Summit Country Club, Crescent, and the final 18 at Appledale Golf Course, Evansburg.

Pittsburgh North Catholic, led by medalist Mark Bope's 149, won the team title. St. Elizabeth of Pittsburgh finished second and Scranton Prep ended third among the 18 schools participating.

ABA may fold, two papers say

GREENSBORO, N.C. (UPI)—The American Basketball Association will dissolve before the end of June, and at least six of its teams will join the rival National Basketball Association, two North Carolina newspapers reported Monday.

The Charlotte Observer and the Greensboro Daily News said NBA Commissioner Walter Kennedy already has tentatively agreed to the plan and will present it to NBA owners later this month.

The two newspapers, apparently quoting the same unidentified source, said Ted Munchak, owner of the Carolina Cougars of the ABA, has been the key man in the negotiations with Kennedy.

Munchak did not deny the reports, telling the Observer, "As far as the two leagues being one in the near future, I would rather not comment."

The Observer said Munchak would meet with Kennedy Thursday to complete details of the plan before the June 11-12 meeting of the ABA in New York.

The proposal will go to the NBA owners at their meeting three days later, June 15-16, at White Sulphur Springs, W.Va.

Both newspapers were told that the Memphis, Pittsburgh and Florida ABA franchises would be disbanded, that the Denver franchise would be "put on ice" while a new arena is built.

The moves would leave Carolina, New York, Indiana, Utah, Dallas and Kentucky as the only ABA clubs certain to be added to the NBA.

"Although there are still a few minor things to be worked out, by the end of June you should see but one league and Munchak has been the one who brought the two leagues together," the Observer was told.

Stock prices drop sharply

New York (UPI) — Prices plunged sharply and broadly Monday on the weight of profit taking, particularly among the glamors and airlines. Trading was relatively light.

The Dow Jones average of 30 selected blue chip industrial stocks dropped 7.00 to 954.39. It had been down more than 8. Standard & Poor's 500 stock index lost 0.91 to 108.82. The average price of a New York Stock Exchange common share decreased by 36 cents.

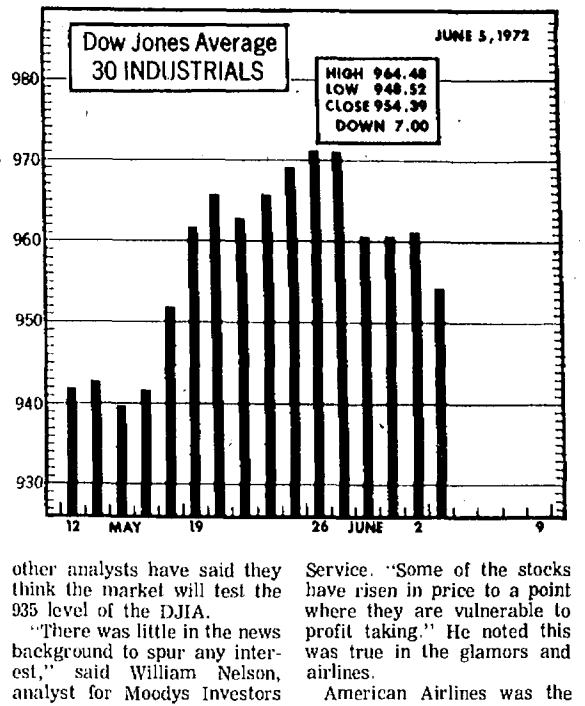

Declines drubbed advances, 986 to 458, among the 1,757 issues crossing the tape. Turnover amounted to 13,450,000 shares, down from the 15,400,000 traded Friday.

"Profit taking is the big thing right now," said Robert Johnson, analyst for Paine, Webber, Jackson and Curtis. "Many institutions are starting to sell off now and they won't get back in until prices are lower." He said the selling should continue for a lengthy period.

"All the good news, economic and otherwise, has been discounted," Johnson said. He and other analysts have said they think the market will test the 935 level of the DJIA.

"There was little in the news background to spur any interest," said William Nelson, analyst for Moody's Investors Service. "Some of the stocks have risen in price to a point where they are vulnerable to profit taking." He noted this was true in the glamors and airlines.

Meeting report

STROUDSBURG — "Existing homes can be expected to sell readily in the immediate months ahead," Realtor Jack Muehlen, president of the Pocono Board of Realtors, said in commenting on information discussed during the May directors meeting of the National Association of Real Estate Boards (NAREB).

More than 1,500 Realtors from across the nation attended the annual gathering in Chicago from May 3-9.

June, July, and August rank above all other months in volume of transactions, according to Muehlen. "In addition, mortgage credit is expected to be readily available, with a variety of terms to match borrower needs. There is some possibility that mortgage interest rates may move up in the fall," he continued.
